

RICHMOND SHOULD NOT WIN IN FACE OFFICIAL RECORD

Refusal to Come Out in the Open and State the Truth Condemned by Thompson.

AT RALLY IN EDGINGTON

Congressman Clyde Tavenner Gets Enthusiastic Greeting at Last Meeting in Country.

Alleging that the official record of George H. Richmond as chairman of the board of supervisors should defeat him in his candidacy for sheriff and charging that he had thrown away $10,000 of the people's money in an attempt to "get" some of his political enemies in order to gratify his own political ambitions, State's Attorney F. E. Thompson made a stirring appeal for the voters to break up the republican ring which has been manipulating affairs in Rock Island county, in the closing rally of the county campaign, before a big crowd at Edgington Saturday evening.

Mr. Thompson repeated the charges which he has made all during the present campaign. He argued that Mr. Richmond's dark chamber tactics, his refusal to come out in the open and declare his position on any proposition, his unfairness and prejudice which has characterized his every move on the county board, clearly demonstrated his unfitness for the present office to which he aspires.

Richmond a Double-Crosser.

To support his contention, he recited how Mr. Richmond had "double-crossed" the Rock Island County Highway Improvement association in its effort to have the $1,000,000 bond issue for hard roads placed upon the ballot. He stated how Mr. Richmond after forcing a secret session of the county board in order to prevent the public from knowing how he stood on the proposition, voted both for and against the plan, after giving his sacred pledge to support it.

"Is this the kind of a man you want for sheriff?" declared the county prosecutor. "Do you want a man who is an office holder, a man who refuses to stand up and declare what his position is? Do you want a man who lacks the courage of his convictions, who keeps continually in the dark, who is afraid of the light of day, who pretends to be for something which he secretly votes against? Do you want in office a man, who is out to indict his political enemies, who is boasting himself as tearing down the reputations of other men? If you do, then vote for Richmond for sheriff. If you don't, defeat him."

Cheer Tavenner.

The other principal speaker of the evening was Congressman Clyde H. Tavenner. Mr. Tavenner was given a rousing welcome on entering the hall and his speech was frequently interrupted with cheers. He discussed briefly his efforts in behalf of the Rock Island arsenal and of his fight to have munitions of war manufactured by the government instead of allowing private interests to get the contracts at exorbitant prices.

He emphasized the fact that Senator Sherman is fighting against the parcel post. He pointed out that the express companies desired the return of Senator Sherman to congress and urged that the common people defeat him. The government ownership of telegraph lines, in order to cut the excessive charges for telegrams, and the government postal banks, were two projects which Mr. Tavenner said he favored. He showed he had not received a cent of campaign contributions so that he was entirely free to represent all the people of his district and he promised to give them the best that is in him. He endorsed all of the democratic candidates and said he felt proud to be on the same ticket with them.

Uphold Wilson.

W. C. Maucker, candidate for the legislature, urged that the people uphold President Wilson's hands by electing men who are pledged to his policies. He said that the president needed a democratic congress and Governor Dunne a democratic legislature, in order that the party might be given a proper opportunity to carry out its promises to the people.

"I want to win on my record, without belittling my opponents," declared Albert Huber, candidate for county judge. "People are more and more forgetting party lines and voting for the men best qualified to fill the positions they seek. It is important for us to win but it is more important that our officials be honest, and efficient. If you think our candidates are best qualified, then it is your duty to support them."

Made False Entries.

Judge R. S. Bell's attitude in the famous Lyness case was attacked by Clyde Walker, candidate for probate judge. He showed how the county judge had been sentenced to county jail by Circuit Judge R. W. Olmsted for refusing to testify relative to his official acts and how false entries had been made on his docket and fictitious names had been used in order to defeat the order of the circuit court.

"Seven Keys to Baldpate" in its novelized form, was printed in The Argus a few months ago. It proved one of the most popular stories furnished readers of the paper in years. It was funny and thrilling at the same time. The story dramatized is even funnier, if that be possible. Earl Biggers is the author of the narrative and George M. Cohan is responsible for the stage version. Cohan and Harris are the producers. They presented a splendid company at the Illinois yesterday, when matinee and night performances were given, both being liberally patronized. Like all of Cohan's plays, it's as clean morally as a hound's tooth; it's healthy melodrama that leaves a good taste in your mouth when the play is ended. In its stage dress the strength of the story is accentuated by its actuality, though Cohan fools his audiences to the top of his bent. At the opening of the play one learns that William Hollowell Magee, a novelist, has made a wager of $5,000 that he can write a 10,000 word story in 24 hours, the only stipulation that he makes being that he can find the "loneliest spot on earth." In the prologue, Magee is discovered arriving at the aforesaid spot—Baldpate Inn—a summer hotel closed for the winter—and the prologue ends with the accompanying clatter of his typewriter as Magee begins his task. At once he is surrounded by a circle of sensational incidents and for two gripping acts the audience sees Magee the center of a gang of political scoundrels, ex-convicts, adventurers, ghosts and detectives who thicken the plot with so much adroitness that its unraveling seems well nigh hopeless, but which author Cohan accomplishes with the cleverness born of intimate knowledge of the art of stagecraft.

The play is to be seen at the Burtis, Davenport, tonight. It's worth going miles to see.

George M. Cohan's cleverest musical play, "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," will be seen here at the Illinois next Saturday. It's bright particular star this season is "Corinne," who takes the title role of just plain Mary, the humorous but essentially human housemaid, whose employment is at New Rochelle, just three-quarters of an hour from New York, this latter fact giving the play its name. In this musical play, as in all his other work, George M. Cohan writes to amuse and entertain the great majority of playgoers and he writes his songs in the same spirit. The lines of "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" are unfailingly laughable and the lyrics catchy and tuneful.

A matchless display of exquisite hand-worked and plain linens

We have not advanced our prices notwithstanding that wholesale prices have gone up 10 to 25%

The displays which we are making this week in our windows and in our Linen Section, second floor, emphasize in no uncertain manner the broad scope of our stocks. These displays demonstrate that whether the need is for an inexpensive table damask by the yard or a gorgeous hand-worked creation worth hundreds of dollars, Harned and Von Maur is capable of supplying it.

It is advisable for anyone expecting the buy linens to buy them now while they can be had at the old prices, because the European situation has seriously crippled the linen industry, and it will in all probability be several years before linens will again be sold at as low prices as you will find in our stock right now. If we were to buy now, prices would be from 10 to 25% higher, and many of our finest pattern cloths, particularly the beautiful Belgian linens, could not be had at all. Therefore, the advantage of buying while present stocks last is plainly evident.

Any impression that large assortments of very fine linens are only to be seen in the larger cities will be dispelled upon seeing the stock we now have ready. Our present showing contains as fine specimens of beautiful hand-worked linens as one will see anywhere.

Better Babies.
The crusade for better babies has spread from coast to coast and taken firm hold of American mothers. Few women realize how much the ill health of the mother influences the unborn child, both physically and mentally. Women who suffer from mysterious pains, backache, nervousness, mental depression, headaches, etc., should rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, which for nearly 40 years has been the standard remedy for these ailments.—(Adv.)

During August New York City's import of foreign merchandise decreased $15,000,000 from 1913; in September, it decreased $9,900,000. In the first half of October, the decrease was $3,100,000.
